SITE

The application site is an irregular parcel of land measuring circa 12.85ha. The site was a part greenfield / part brownfield site. The western portion of the site was formerly covered by Rex Mill, while the remainder was historically agricultural land, before later being converted into playing fields which were vacant.

The site lies between the A669 (Oldham Road) to the south, the embankment of the Rochdale to Manchester railway line to the east, the urban fringe of Boarshaw (Glenwood Drive/Hereford Way) to the north and the highway of Hilton Fold Lane to the west. The site is bisected horizontally by the River Irk which runs through the heart of the site.

Established residential areas lie to the north of the site off Glenwood Drive and extend towards Chelford Close and beyond. To the east, the site is bound by a railway line and associated embankment which is heavily covered by trees and shrubbery. Residential and Employment uses are situated to the south and west of the site.

ANALYSIS

Paragraph 002 to section 17a of the National Planning Practice Guidance (NPPG) states that:

There is no statutory definition of 'non-material'. This is because it will be dependent on the context of the overall scheme – an amendment that is non-material in one context may be material in another. The local planning authority must be satisfied that the amendment sought is non-material in order to grant an application under section 96A of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990.

Therefore, the purpose of the application is to seek the Council's determination as to whether the changes to the previously approved details are sufficiently material in their nature and in the context of the approved development so as to require a fresh planning permission or not. Non-material amendment applications are not an application for planning permission, do not result in the issuing of a new planning permission and relate only to the amendments sought.

Paragraph 008 to section 17a of the NPPG states that in making decisions on non-material amendment applications, the local planning authority should take into account:

The effect of the change, together with any previous changes made under section 96A. They must also take into account any representations made by anyone notified, provided they are received within 14 days of notification. As this is not an application for planning permission, section 38(6) of the Planning and Compulsory Purchase Act 2004 does not apply.

Paragraph 011 to section 17a of the NPPG states that the issuing of an approval for a non-material amendment application:

...only relates to the non-material amendments sought and the notice of the decision should describe these. It is not a reissue of the original planning permission, which still stands. The two documents should be read together.

Section 96A of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 also allows for new conditions to be imposed, or existing conditions to be removed or altered in the issuing of a decision for a non-material amendment application.

Assessment of the non-material amendment

The change of materials as proposed above are not considered to have a material impact on the character and appearance of the approved development. The amendments are required due to brick availability for some of the remaining plots on the final phase. The amended brick selection is not significantly dissimilar to those previously approved and are considered a suitable alternative to those previously approved. For this reason, officers are of the opinion that the amendment would not have any material effect on the planning permission originally granted.
